

SICKLENEMIA

WEDNESDAY 14th NOVEMBER 2001

6.30

Sickle Cell Disease is a painful genetic haematological [blood] disorder. It is unpredictable in timing, duration and severity and the children who have this disorder often have physical and psychological complications. Sicklenemia is an organisation that has been set up to provide education, support and advice for families of people suffering with sicklenemia. A presentation on the work of Sicklenemia will be followed by practical advice and discussions.

A must for parents, carers and professionals.
